CX288/1 Papers re Conwy CBC

CX288/1/1 c.1950-2007 Files created by IWJ for journalistic and research purposes.

These can include documents in all formats including books, magazines, articles, research notes, IWJ's copy, photographs and computer floppy discs.

They have been listed solely by the title that IWJ himself gave them including his own cross-references with, very occasionally, a brief explanation of their contents. The arrangement of this section is alphabetical. On a few occasions an artificial 'file' has been created by the cataloguers from loose material, in line with these guidelines.

Includes lengthy correspondence on the decision to appoint Iorwerth (Iori) Roberts to the vacant post of columnist responsible for the 'Day To Day In Wales' column, in favour of IWJ. The correspondence records IWJ's acute disappointment to learn that the post, which he believed was his to inherit, has gone to someone else. The Editor-in-Chief of the 'Liverpool Daily Post & Echo', Ian Park, suggests that they utilise IWJ's skills to write feature articles. In Nov 1990, IWJ was appointed Chief Correspondent (Wales).]

| CX288/1/1/42 | 1974-1975 | 'Day to Day in Wales'.
Typescript of IWJ's daily column. Includes a report on the reprint of the Norman Tucker publication 'Colwyn Bay, It's Origins and Growth' in 1974 and comments on the pressures placed on NT to produce the original manuscript and the fact that he never had the opportunity to edit many of the proofs. Once the book was published, NT discovered that parts of his manuscript had never been printed. IWJ notes that the publishers of the revised edition (Colwyn District Council) have unfortunately reprinted all the worst errors from the original whilst amending and 'making nonsense' of sections which were originally correct. IWJ quotes examples of unnecessary changes and laments the lack of an index. |

CX288/1/2/4	1950s-2003	BUNDLE OF COPY written by IWJ. Topics include the Aer Lingus Disaster [1952]; the new Conway Road Bridge (1958); plans to expand the Hotel and Catering School in Llandudno to form a North Wales Technology Centre, possibly in conjunction with the Technical Institute at Colwyn Bay (1959); newspaper cutting on the Welsh Coast Resorts' Catering Trades Exhibition to be held in Llandudno in 1971; report of a court appearance by Sidney Rawlinson Cain of London, accused of obtaining money by false pretences from North Wales hotels (1959); report on the imminent opening of Ysgol Gogarth, Llandudno, a special needs school for 60 pupils (1962); cleaning of statue of Llewelyn the Great in Lancaster Square, Conway and a comment that this provided an opportunity to correct a heraldic error when it was erected in 1898 (1966); report on speculation about the location of the ancient house of Plas Isaf which stood on the site of the reconstructed Town Hall at Conway until 1851.

IWJ discovers the answer when he sees a painting of Castle Street which includes Plas Isaf, hanging on the walls of the Borough Council Offices (1966); report on witchcraft in a 'black magic' den on the Little Orme (1972); report on James Hanratty's Rhyl alibi following a radio programme on the subject 10 years after Hanratty was hanged (1972); details of the 'Conway Star', one of two new luxury fishing boats commissioned for trips in Liverpool Bay (1973); mummified human remains discovered in a stable loft at Plas-y-n-Llysfaen (1973); the fate of the St Trillo, last survivor of the Liverpool & North Wales Steamship Co., sold for conversion into a floating restaurant (1973); speculation on the location of Mochdre's first chapel built in 1780 and later converted into a house that was still known to exist in 1909 (1973); 'Does Mussolini have a Welsh grandson?', speculation that a chamber maid, Annie, from a Llandudno boarding house spent a night of passion on the Great Orme, c.1902, with an Italian named Benito. Annie gave birth to a son she named Ben. In 1924 she took Ben (aged 21) to Italy for a holiday and he never came back. Annie told everyone he had gone into the ice cream business in one of the Italian colonies and soon after, Annie herself appears to have disappeared. Twenty years later, British troops liberating North Africa discovered a 17 year old Welsh-speaking Arab orphan called Ibn Ben ap Benito, who named Annie as his next of kin. Annie was traced to Liverpool but refused to speak to journalists, indicating that the answers were in her 'little black box'. The box was taken away by men claiming to be from Military Intelligence and was never seen again (1974); tourism in Llandudno and North Wales (1979 and 2000); report on a Llandudno fairground accident which resulted in the death of a local girl (1979); a memorial stone to Lewis Carroll to be installed in Poets' Corner at Westminster Abbey [with photograph], (1982); news that the Vicar of Colwyn Bay has been driven out of the vicarage by burglars and beggars (2001); a Christmas Day snowstorm and ensuing travel problems (n.d.); articles on mink farming in the Conwy Valley (n.d.); plans to build a new reservoir in mid-Wales; the nature of being Welsh; Anne Robinson; the legal system; the Holy Land; the romanticisation of the past; Plaid Cymru; Welsh tourism; Palestine; the closure of Dolgarrog Aluminium Works; the National Botanical Garden; political correctness; mis-spelling of Welsh words by railway companies; Michael Howard; Welsh republicanism; alcohol; the Free Wales Army; the 111th annual conference of the Cambrian Archaeological Association; the RNLI; John Cowper Powys; the 1st Northumberland Hussars Yeomanry; a Swedish coast defence gun displayed in Caernarfon Castle; the nameplate of Llanfair PG railway station going to a York museum; shellfish called 'queens'; Rhyl as a 'sunny resort'; marriage rites; Welsh travellers; Ifor Bowen Griffith of Caernarfon; low-flying aircraft and Gwyneth Jones' opera concert.

CX288/1/2/5

MANUSCRIPT (typed) entitled:

"Some of the Background Facts to the Front Page Stories in the Daily Press on 5 August 1948, all of which went under similar headings to 'He Did Not Like Boats so Hitchhiked 2500 miles in Eight Days', written by the hitchhiker himself three years after the event so that he would not forget any more of the little facts that made the story as the years rolled by."

Written by IWJ and marked 'Copyright and Not for Publication in Part or in its Entirety'.

The manuscript describes how the author (a Corporal in the British Army) and his friend Harry Salisbury end up in Cyprus following the evacuation of No. 4 Forces Broadcasting Unit from Palestine in May - June 1948.

Realising that the Army had nothing in writing to confirm his 'foolish' decision (made 3 months earlier) to defer his release for 6 months, he decides not to sign the paperwork. It is only later that he realises that in so doing, he is effectively severing his ties with the British Army.

Determined that when he does leave Cyprus it will not be 'aboard a miserable troopship' but by plane, he is eventually told to sail to Port Said in Egypt, from where his air-passage would be arranged. He subsequently discovers that he is actually destined to spend 10 days in a transit camp in Egypt awaiting a ship which was later due to call at Cyprus!

Making an excuse to leave the queue for the Egypt-bound ship, the author manages to locate the friend who drove him to the dock and makes his escape.

There follows an account of how, armed with a fake pass and 1½ d in cash, he 'hitchhiked' his way home across Europe, bluffing military and national authorities and covering an average of 300 miles per day.
