Society of Genealogists' Archives

This collection comprises the surviving internal papers created by the Society of Genealogists since its foundation in 1911.

The idea of the creation of a Society of Genealogists was proposed in a letter to Notes & queries by the Hertfordshire antiquarian William Blyth Gerish. He, Charles Bernau, and two professional genealogists, George Sherwood and Richard Holworthy, formed the nucleus of the Society which was incorporated with fifty members in 1911. Those early members saw the aim of the Society as a major resource for genealogists, to transcribe and index original records, and to campaign to make original documents more accessible. These are still the aims of the Society. It was partly due to them that the 1841 & 1851 census returns were released to the public in 1912.

Over the years the gifts of materials donated to the Society have outgrown a number of different premises but membership was still less than 1,000 just after the second World War. The mid fifties, however, saw the beginning of the modern surge of interest in the subject & the publication of Willis's Genealogy for beginners - the first of the modern "how-to-do-it" books. By the time the Society moved to its present building in Charterhouse Buildings during 1984, membership had grown to about 8500. By the end of the twentieth century it was over 14,000.

Material less than thirty years old is not available for public access.
