CONTEXT

Administrative/Biographical history: The Contemporary Art Society for Wales grew out of an attempt, in the 1930s, to 'link up the Welsh art movement with any cultural movement in the distressed areas in Wales.' After a series of successful exhibitions of contemporary art selected by Augustus John (1878-1961), the inaugural meeting of the society took place in Paddington, London, in April 1937. The main aims of the society were to purchase works of art by contemporary artists, to hold exhibitions, and to place the works in institutions where they would be on public view. The method of purchasing was defined at the outset. Half of the Purchasing Fund was placed at the disposal of the Purchaser (elected by the committee, serving for one year) and the other half was retained as a Reserve Fund. Because the minimum annual subscription had been set at one guinea (£1 1s, = £1.05), post-War inflation severely affected the society's purchasing power. The society received a measure of financial assistance from the Welsh Committee of the Arts Council. Later, the society ceased to organise touring exhibitions, and concentrated on displays of its recent purchases. Lord Snowdon acted as President of the Society, 1962-1991; purchasers have included Kyffin Williams (1986-1987) and Diana Armfield (1990-1991). The society celebrated its jubilee year in 1987.
