Introduction

This society dates back to the early 1830s when the adherents of Primitive Methodism first reached Berkshire. After the early open-air meetings and services held in local cottages and rented premises, the society bought Union Chapel in Union Court off Bartholomew Street in 1837, and moved into their newly-built Gothic church in 1877. The construction of this building, however, proved to be unsound. The roof was a constant source of trouble, and the church was declared unfit for use after the front gable collapsed in the early 1940s. Repairs were undertaken, but signs of movement detected in 1959 once again caused the church to be declared unsafe, and the hall to the rear was adapted and furnished for services to continue there. The church itself was demolished in 1962.

Attempts during the next ten years to find a new site on which to rebuild were in vain. There were also proposals to join up with other south Newbury societies in a new church. The need to sell the "Bart. St." site to finance a new building led eventually to an amalgamation with Stroud Green, begun in 1967 with the merger of the two Sunday Schools and then both societies' funds and membership. Morning services were held at Bart. St. and evening worship at Stroud Green, until finally the Bart. St. site was sold in 1971.

Bartholomew Street was the headquarters of the Newbury Primitive Methodist circuit until Methodist Union in 1937 (see D/MC 8, although few records survive). From 1937, it became part of the combined Newbury circuit (D/MC 9).

(See also D/EX 435/2 relating to Union Chapel; and Q/SO 14 p17 and Q/SO 15 p98 and p296 for registrations of religious meeting houses in Newbury. Apart from D/MS 2/8/1 below, no records survived at the church for the period up to 1877. Although Union Chapel had a burial ground, no burial records have been identified; see, however, MF 597 for burials of Newbury dissenters to 1837).
