Accession No. 1285

Timothy O'Mahoney was born in Newport of Irish parents, who settled there in 1877. He attended St. Michaels School for a time and when of working age, studied in the evenings under the Rev. Edgar Williams, M.A., B.D., Principal of Maindee College. He took a special course of training to qualify for a scholarship examination for Dublin University - as something to work for - and continued his studies in mathematics, Latin, Greek, French and the English Classics until the death of the Rev. Williams. His first employment was in the works at Isca Foundry with his father and later in the stores department. In about 1906 he became permanent Way Stores Clerk for the Alexandra Dock Company in Newport. In addition to his own studies he coached pupils for London University, the Civil Service and other examinations.

N. Cleaves "The Laurels", Clytha Park, Newport to T. O'Mahoney.
Comments on "Conduct of the Understanding" and his own ideas on education i.e. too cheap and therefore not valued by parents and students, teachers not really interested in what they teach; too much cramming and not enough basic grounding. Recommends payment of teachers by results obtained; advocates a greater interest in sex education in school and home life; agrees that children sent to school too early.
Sends his own ideas, more fully expressed, in form of articles for various journals and requests their return.
