THE LORD LIEUTENANT

This is the office of sovereign's deputy or viceroy in a county. The Lord Lieutenant is thus the chief executive authority in that county, through whom the policy decisions of the central government would be directed. Conversely he would represent the considerations of the county at Court and to the government. Because of these exalted duties the honour was usually given to the principal aristocratic landowner in the county. Deputy lieutenants would be appointed to carry out the directions given by him. The office also had the power to recommend, and so thus constitute, the Commission of the Peace, the body of justices of the peace or magistrates who supervised the legal and administrative systems of the county through the medium of their Quarter Sessions court. The Lord Lieutenant also had responsibility for local defence and accordingly controlled the county militia forces. This aspect of his work is dealt with in more detail in the second introduction.

The collection catalogued below contains some of the working papers, mainly correspondence, of four successive Lord Lieutenants of Caernarvonshire and one future Lord Lieutenant as a Vice Lieutenant. These are:

The 7th Viscount Bulkeley 1781-1822
  Thomas Assheton-Smith 1822-1828
The 22nd Baron Willoughby de Eresby 1828-1851
  Sir Richard Williams-Bulkeley 10th Bt. 1851-1866

and as Vice Lieutenant The Hon. Edward Gordon Douglas-Pennant 1854-1860 who succeeded Williams-Bulkeley in 1856 and was in 1866 created Baron Fenhyn of Llandegai.

Reference to the contents page will indicate that the papers in this collection do not cover every year of each Lord Lieutenant's term. Further archive sources for the Lord Lieutenancy in this period are given at the end of the introductions.

From the point of view of bulk and personal interest the correspondence between Owen Anthony Poole and Lord Bulkeley should be considered. With this in mind I have provided short introductory biographies for them both.

The 7th Viscount Bulkeley

Thomas James, 7th Viscount Bulkeley, was the last representative of a noble family that had dominated Anglesey since the late 16th century. Their principal seat was at Baron Hill above Beaumaris which Bulkeley had rebuilt under Samuel Wyatt from 1774. Tragically the mansion is now in ruins and its famous gardens are overgrown. Bulkeley had another seat at Englefield Green in Berkshire where he died, which he tended to use in preference to his London house in Stanhope Street when in the south.

He became 7th Viscount at birth and made a Grand Tour of Europe twice, once after graduating between 1773 and 1774 and again with his wife Elizabeth Warren between 1784 and 1786. His first tour had been in the company of George Grenville the younger, who became his close friend, and gave Bulkeley access to the important social and political connections in England represented by the interrelated Grenville, Temple and Pitt families. Grenville said at the time, "I have never found in him one quality which I did not admire". William Pitt gave him a British peerage in 1784 (the family viscountcy being Irish.)

Bulkeley devoted much of his time and efforts to maintaining his family's principal interests in Anglesey and restoring them in Caernarvonshire. He sat as the member for Anglesey between 1774 and 1784, was Chamberlain of North Wales from 1771 and Lord Lieutenant of Caernarvonshire from 1781. His local patronage and charity were extensive and his esteem in both Anglesey and Caernarvonshire was measured by the lavish funeral and mourning given to him on his death. Mr Thomas Richards the cataloguer of the Baron Hill estate archive comments that Bulkeley was, "spaciously wide in interests, given to acts of discreet and highminded philanthropy, and able to blend broad humour with a capacity for biting sarcasm". Examples in this collection appear to uphold this opinion and perhaps too a certain lack of tact in dealing with his lesser colleagues.

For the militia Bulkeley raised the Loyal Anglesea Volunteers in 1797 and commanded them until their dissolution in 1802. From 1803 he commanded the Anglesey Loyal Voluntary Infantry and then from 1808 the Anglesey Local Militia through to 1816.

Bulkeley was painted by Romney in Rome during 1773 and by Francis Sartorius in the hunting field in the same year. Beechey painted him as an old man. The Sartorius was sold by Christie's in 1926.

Owen Anthony Poole

Owen Anthony Poole, the son of Richard Poole, a Beaumaris Attorney at Law, practised as a solicitor in Caernarfon and lived at Gorphwysfa in Bangor. He seems to have been a remarkably ubiquitous man holding as many official posts as he could manage which is perhaps one of the reasons why he remained a bachelor.

Poole was appointed Clerk to the General Meetings of the Lieutenancy in 1796. As clerk he co-ordinated and organised lieutenancy business under Bulkeley's direction. He was in fact also Bulkeley's agent for the family's Caernarvonshire estates. Together with this post he held the office of County Treasurer from 1809, succeeding Hugh Ellis. From his father he inherited the offices of Deputy Chamberlain and Chancellor of North Wales both of which he was unwilling to give up when he also became Clerk of the Peace on the death of William Hughes in 1815. The Clerkship was the rough equivalent of the General Meetings office only for the Commission of the Peace. Judging from the correspondence he may have been manoeuvring for the post as early as 1807. He also seems to have had pretensions if the allusions made to his desired knighthood are correct.

Poole died in 1823 and both the Clerkship of the Peace and that of the General Meetings seem to have gone to his nephew, Richard Anthony Poole.
THE MILITIA

The Militia Act of 1757 assigned to each county a quota for the number of men that had to be raised for the militia, an auxiliary force for the defence of the realm independent of the standing army. These men were selected by ballot from so called militia lists made up by the tithingmen or parish constables. [This collection does not contain any true militia lists although bundle 5 contains a couple of isolated returns which are similar in form]. Every man between the ages of 18 and 50 (later reduced to 45) was liable to serve in the militia for a term of 3 (later increased to 5) years. Every parish had to provide a certain number of men. Annual training periods were to be established. Service by substitute was allowed and became common. Certain classes of men were exempt, clergymen, apprentices, practising doctors, parish officials and later those serving in the voluntary militia. The arrangements were supervised by the General Meetings of the Lieutenancy attended by the justices of the peace and the deputy lieutenants.

The Supplementary Militia was formed in 1794 as a response to the war with revolutionary France, and served to increase the county quotas by establishing additional militia corps. Under the same act volunteer militia corps could also be formed, dependant on private means. Following the peace of Amiens 1802 these additional forces were disbanded, only to be re-constituted when peace broke down in the New Year. The 1804 Additional Forces Act governed these reconstituted forces.

The Provisional Cavalry Act of 1796 required that one cavalryman, fully equipped and mounted, had to be provided by every person owning 10 horses on which duty was paid. Those owning less than 10 had to form unions with others to provide the necessary horseman. The cavalryman himself would be selected by ballot. The act was amended the same year allowing threequarters of the force to be made up on a voluntary basis.

The Defence of the Realm Act of 1798 resulted in the formation of local armed associations of unballoted men, responsible to local committees. These associations were to man beacons, transport provisions and corral livestock if the need should arise.

In 1807 the Local Militia Act dissolved all the voluntary corps with some exceptions. They were replaced by a local militia force recruited voluntarily with any shortfall met by a ballot. No substitutions were allowed. The local militiaman was not expected to serve outside the bounds of his own or neighbouring counties in peace time unlike the regular militia man and could be called out by the Lord Lieutenant. The Local Militia was dissolved in May 1816.

The Caernarvonshire regular militia was raised in 1762 under the 1757 Act, and continued in regular annual training until 1783. It was reconstituted in 1793 and was deployed on the south coast to counter any invasion by the French. After 1803 the Royal Canarvonshire Militia again served on the south coast, continuing to do so until November 1810 when its voluntary offer to serve in Ireland was taken up. It remained in Ireland until May 1813 and then spent the rest of the war stationed in Scotland. The corps returned to Caernarvonshire in June 1814 and were disembodied. Since 1793 their commanding officer had been Richard Edwards of Nanhoron. The regular militia remained in dissolution until 1820 and thereafter was only sporadically raised and trained. The voluntary corps formed in 1803 were the Loyal Carnarvon Merchantile, the Bangor, the Loyal Conway, the Loyal Newborough Infantry, the Loyal Eifionydd and the Loyal Snowdon Rangers. The Carnarvon, Bangor and Conway corps were amalgamated the following year. All these forces were dissolved under the Local Militia Act which created a county Local Militia commanded by Thomas Assheton-Smith. Volunteer corps founded after 1859 were the Caernarvonshire Artillery Volunteers and the Caernarvonshire Rifle Volunteers.

For further details on the militia forces in the county the researcher should refer to Bryn Owen's 'History of the Welsh Militia and Volunteer Corps 1757-1908: Anglesey and Caernarvonshire' 1989.
OTHER ARCHIVE SOURCES

The Poole Papers

The Poole family archive, deposited in the Gwynedd County Record Office in Caernarfon, contains material relating to O. A. Poole's business with the lieutenancy, as Clerk of the Peace, as County Treasurer and in his private capacity as a solicitor. The bulk of the lieutenancy series consists of correspondence with Bulkeley relating directly to the correspondence contained in this collection and catalogued below. In fact the letters in the Poole Papers cover the years largely devoid of material in this collection, 1795-1802, 1806 and 1812-1820. Apart from the solicitor's records the relevant papers are listed in the first volume of the Poole archive, 1-791, reference X/POOLE. The solicitor's records are catalogued between 6272 and 6415 with the same reference.

The Baron Hill Archive

The Baron Hill collection, deposited in the archives department of the University College of North Wales at Bangor, contains the estate records of the Bulkeley family. The Williams correspondence within this includes material relating to both O. A. Poole and Bulkeley during the first decade of the 19th century. This correspondence is catalogued between numbers 6152 and 6417. There is also a small amount of material relating directly to the lieutenancy which can be found under 5627 in the catalogue.

Correspondence between the 7th Viscount Bulkeley,
Lord Lieutenant and Owen Anthony Poole,
Clerk of the General Meeting's of the Lieutenancy.
1801-1821 (except where stated)

NOTE - This collection was preserved by Poole's office and so includes only rough drafts of the letters sent out by Poole to Ld.Lt. Bulkeley and various other correspondents. Also included are copies of documents and other letters inserted for reference into the correspondence between the Lord Lieutenant and his Clerk.
His opinion on certain dispositions.

February 8th. and 19th.
(i) J. Jones of Gelliniog to Bulkeley
Problems are anticipated by disbanded troops in Anglesey and civil unrest is expected. His request for militia reinforcements to be sent is disregarded. The draft of an advertisement for a reward for the apprehension of the supposed ring leader named as Thomas Jones, 'formerly of Sir Watkin Williams-Wynn's regiment'. The implication of John of [Monat? possibly Monachty, the correct spelling of which is Mynachty] from Anglesey, in disruptive activities.
(ii) Draft of Ld. Bulkeley's reply. Edward Griffiths 'active interference' in stating that the alarm was, 'visionary'.

February 13th, 20th and 24th.
(ii) Thomas Jones and Henry Lloyd, bailiffs of Caernarfon to Bulkeley.
Enclosing a resolution for the stationing of the militia in the town.
(iii) Bulkeley to Griffith.
Acknowledging the thanks of the mayor and corporation of Caernarfon for stationing the militia in the town for their 'permanent duty'. His denial of any decision to remove them.

February 17th. The Earl of Uxbridge to the bailiffs of Caernarfon.
The stationing of a half troop of dragoons in the town as requested by them.

Regarding the removal of the militia from the town by Edward Griffith. [Edwards was the commanding officer of the county militia].

February 19th. Petition from the inhabitants of Caernarfon to the Earl of Uxbridge, mayor, Ld. Bulkeley and Lt. Col. [Richard] Edwards, for the militia stationed in the town to be placed under the authority of the borough.
1803

7/7 January 20th. Bulkeley to Poole.
The non payment for deputy lieutenant's commissions.

/8 January 24th. Poole to Bulkeley.
Enclosing a commissission for the Rev. Henry Jones.

/9 March 18th. [Poole] to Bulkeley, [letter damaged].
The progress of subdivisional returns for Conwy, Caernarfon and Pwllheli.

/10 March 29th. R.Parry of Pwllheli to Poole.
A warrant to locate a woman [named Isaac] fails in its execution.

/11 May 30th. Bulkeley to [Poole].
Convening a meeting of the deputy lieutenancy to raise the supplementary militia.
[This was an additional voluntary militia force raised for home defence, revived after the brief respite of the Peace of Amiens in 1803. Initially several individual Corps were raised, united in 1808 as the Local Militia].

/12 June 2nd. Poole to Bulkeley.
Enclosing orders of the general meeting of the Lieutenancy regarding the supplementary militia. The postponement of the ballot.

/13 June 10th. Bulkeley to [Poole].
Enclosing a circular letter and royal warrant for embodying the supplementary militia.

7/18  July 5th. [Poole] to Bulkeley.
A list of deputy lieutenants with an account of charges for repairing their commissions. A list of justices invited to attend the coming lieutenancy meeting.

7/19  July 5th. Bulkeley to [Poole].
The exclusion of [Gwyllym Lloyd] Wardle, the High Sheriff, from the lieutenancy meeting.

7/20  July 9th. Bulkeley to Poole.

7/21  July 17th. [Poole] to Bulkeley.
The proposals to form a volunteer corps [under the Supplementary Militia Act]. The preparations of an address to the King from the County of Anglesey.

7/22  July 27th. Bulkeley to Poole.
The formation of a corps of volunteers.
His doubts about forming and leading a volunteer company from men drawn from, 'my neighbouring parishes'. His willingness to serve his country for 'rebelling a foreign aswell as a domestic foe'. Ld. Bulkeley's unreasonable and 'treacherous manner' towards him on making a similar offer in the past. He expects similar treatment again and determines to 'sit down quiet and be knock'd in the head sooner or later.'

August 6th. [Poole] to W.Williams of Plashen.
He is accepted to serve as a deputy lieutenant. His misapprehension in assuming that Ld. Bulkeley did not wish him to serve as a justice of the peace.

August 25th. W. Williams of Plashen to Poole.
Excusing his likely absence from the General Meetings.

The parish of Edern's refusal to complete a proper return for the deputy lieutenancy meeting and the lack of returns from Llangybi, Llanarmon, Penmorfa, Dolbenmaen and Beddgelert.

August 29th. [Poole] to William Williams of Plashen.
He is prevented from sending him his commission.

August [no day given]. Bulkeley to Poole.
Requiring a copy of proceedings. His deposit of £30 on account until the deputy lieutenancy commissions are settled. His hopes for the success of their efforts in forming a volunteer corps.

Regarding Haslam's commission.

/35 November 11th. Poole to Bulkeley.
Changing his appointment with him.

/36 November 12th. Bulkeley to [Poole] [see also 7/40 and 7/41].
Capt. Coxe's receipts of a letter from Prince [William of Gloucester] about establishing a depot for cattle, carts and waggons in each division, and the surveying of the livestock of the county. His impatience to receive from Glynne Griffith the, '242 stand of arms from Ld. Newborough's s[en]tries', Ld. Newborough, 'withholding them when the county is really menaced and in danger and many volunteer corps unarmed, particularly the Convey and Evionydd [Eifionydd].
[Ld. Newborough had an extremely obsessive interest in the military and spent a fortune on building forts for and equipping his own voluntary militia at Glynllivon from the 1770's].
The urgency for Sir Robert [Williams] to establish this rifle corps, [the Loyal Snowden Rangers].
The dangers of false alarms regarding the lighting of beacons. The Prince's opinion that, 'Ireland is certainly the main object of attack and that many think if they [the French] escape Cornwallis, [Admiral Sir William Cornwallis, in command of the Channel fleet] they will try for Dublin at once sending their transports on and fighting a battle with Ld. Gardner if he overtakes them. [Admiral, the 1st Ld. Gardner was Commander in Chief of the Irish coast]. His planned visit to Conway, 'to settle their brigading with the Carnavons' [The Loyal Carnarvon Mercantile Volunteers].
Capt. Coxe's opinion that Llanrwst would make a suitable location for a depot.
November 19th. [Poole] to Bulkeley.
Enclosing a copy of the orders the general meeting of the lieutenancy.

November 21st. Bulkeley to Poole.
Enclosing a letter for Capt. [John] Haslam. Requiring returns to be sent.

August 24th, Bulkeley to [Poole] [two pieces].
The question of the Rev. Hughes'; curate of St. Anne's, Capel Curig; appointment to the Commission of the Peace, despite his wife being the local innkeeper. The need for J.P.'s in some areas. His opinion that, 'if well educated, well ordered men were in plenty in those regions I should listen to my own pride but as in all matters of government, internal and external, even that of a common parish, [it] is a choice of difficulties. We must take the least'
The preparation of a new commission. The inclusion of Mr. Caldicot [Caldecott] in it, other possible candidates are required. The probable marriage of Mr. Erskine to a Miss Williams of Conwy. The marriage of Mr. Hanmer to Miss Forbes. Enquiring as to his and Col. Edwards' opinion on whether the militia should, 'be trained and exercised next year [as] half a regiment is not creditable to our county.'
The popular enthusiasm for the Queen in London, her trial. A Bow Street Runner is turned out of a coach as a suspect 'spy' of the King's. The insults levelled at the Marquess [of Anglesey] and the Duke of Wellington [for their support of the King]. His own opinion of the situation.
[The Queen was tried and acquitted of adultery before the House of Lords and was the object of tremendous popular support].

July 23rd, Messrs. Jenkins and Co. to Bulkeley.
The setting of the new Commission of the Peace.

August 7th, Bulkeley to Poole [with enclosure].
The new Commission of the Peace is approaching completion. The king is to visit Plas Newydd [the seat of the Marquess of Anglesey]. His own improving health. He comments on the relationship between the King and Queen. [Bulkeley apparently alludes to a probable knighthood for Poole which he was attempting, unsuccessfully in the end; to procure from the king. This would explain to some extent the rather obscure references in the undated letter following and assign a date accordingly to it].

[August].
Undated note 'Ld. Bulkeley's prognostication [prediction] as to Sir Anthony has failed, eheu! eheu! [alas! alas!]'. Had it been verified L.S. [?] would it not have been right for the gallant knight to have solicited a further favour of his Majesty, viz. that he would be graciously pleased to grant His Royal licence and authority to make a slight alteration in his surname, by merely changing his initial letter? [This is a reference presumably to Poole's unsuccessful application for a knighthood. His second name was Anthony. The joke about changing the initial letter of his surname was probably substituting the letter P for the letter F making it into Foole].
7/192 August 16th, [Poole] to Bulkeley.
His receipt of the new Commission of the Peace. He considers the, 'state of the county under you lordship's charge as ... highly creditable'.

/193 September 24th, Elizabeth Roberts of Red Lion St. Caernarfon to Bulkeley [two pieces].

Militia demands on parishes noted with related correspondence and general correspondence by Owen Anthony Poole's office as County Treasurer. 1809-1817

NOTE - Poole's clerk, who handled much of the correspondence was William Hughes. This collection has been organised by the parish concerned, alphabetically, and then under the headings of correspondence to the Merionethshire County Treasurer and general correspondence. Both these section are in date order.
MILITIA DEMANDS - INTRODUCTION

Both the regular and local militia forces were liable to serve outside the county, more especially the regular. The families of militiamen stationed away from home were given an allowance by the foreign parish. The home parish would have to reimburse the county stock with the necessary money that had been paid out on their behalf to the county of the foreign parish. In the instances existing here the militiamen were serving as substitutes for men actually balloted. The home parish of the balloted man was in fact ultimately liable to pay for the substitute's allowance and his parish would be reimbursed accordingly. It was not unusual for substitutes to belong to a different parish. Legally they could be found from any parish in the same or a neighbouring county. As substitution was not allowed in the local militia the men listed here must have been serving in the regular militia.

An example of the balloted parish not meeting its obligation occurs under Eglwys Rhos, see below 11/25-11/27. Abererch being the defaulting parish of the balloted Evan Williams. Conwy experienced similar difficulties in being repaid by the Anglesey parishes of Llanddaniel, Holyhead and Llanddona. Unfortunately the militia demands themselves do not record the balloted man's parish. Abererch and Llannor, from the content of the letters, appear to be the only definite examples in the county, repaying militia demands made on Eglwys Rhos and Llaniestyn.
11/1/1-6  1812-1814  1-6 statements of money due from the parish for money paid to the treasurer of Sussex for maintaining the family of Thomas Price 1811-1814, he serving as a substitute in the militia for Henry Williams.

11/2  1813 Oct. 21  Hughes to the overseers. Requiring payment of militia demand.
