PREFACE

This catalogue of the John Clare Collection marks the occasion of the centenary of the poet's death. It has been compiled by Mr. David Powell, Reference Librarian, who has not only devoted much application and research to the task, but has brought to his work the rarer qualities of a lifetime's regard for Clare and his poetry.

In addition to hundreds of Clare's letters and other material the Northampton collection contains the manuscript sources of no fewer than 1,350 poems, including many published in Clare's lifetime as well as nearly all those of the Northampton Asylum period. It has therefore been thought appropriate to add to this catalogue indexes of first lines and titles as a guide to scholars and editors of Clare. In a number of cases the index reveals more than one version of the same poem.

The Clare Collection at Northampton began with the bookcase and library which John Taylor of Northampton secured for the town soon after Clare's death. In 1920 the Library bought the Stewart Beattie Collection which contained many Clare items, including the Taylor transcripts of the asylum poems, Clare's diary with a transcript, six volumes of letters and poems in Clare's hand, correspondence with Frederick Warne & Co., correspondence with J. L. Cherry, etc. In 1934 an important collection was bought from William H. Robinson, Ltd., which consisted of manuscript poems, a long series of letters from Clare to his publishers Messrs. Taylor and Hessey, letters from Edward Drury, etc. all once in the possession of Messrs. Taylor and Hessey. In 1938 a number of manuscripts once in the possession of Frederick Martin, Clare's first biographer, were purchased from his daughter, Miss Louisa Martin, and later in the same year H. J. Cove presented the important Knight transcripts of the asylum poems and a series of letters from Thomas Inskip to Clare and W. F. Knight. These are some of the larger contributions that have gone to form the Clare Collection as it is today.

Those manuscripts that are known by 'Northampton numbers' and are so referred to in published works have retained these numbers, although thereby chronological arrangement has suffered. It should also be noted that this catalogue aims to record items of unique interest only, and therefore only incidental reference is made to the comprehensive collection of books about Clare and to the numerous newspaper and magazine cuttings that also form part of the Clare Collection. References to John Taylor during Clare's lifetime concern his London publisher, while references after Clare's death in 1864 concern the Northampton publisher and bookseller. They were unrelated. In the case of items shown in the Exhibition held in Peterborough in 1893 in honour of Clare's birth a cross reference is made to their number in that catalogue.

It is hoped that this guide will prove useful to lovers and students of Clare. It is intended as a companion volume to the one being prepared by Miss W. M. Grainger to the other major collection of the poet's work owned by the Peterborough Museum Society.

JOHN POOLE, Chairman.

D. HOWARD HALLIDAY, Chief Librarian.

MANUSCRIPTS

HOLOGRAPH MANUSCRIPTS IN BOOK FORM

1. A foolscap volume of poems, inscribed on p.4 in neat copperplate in imitation of the title-page of a book A Rustic's Pastime, in Leisure Hours; [J. Clare. | Helpston; | 1814.

134"×8", 252 pp., vellum.

This is the 'blank book' which Clare bought in 1814, from J. B. Henson, a Market Deeping bookseller, to mark his twenty-first birthday, and for which he gave eight shillings, the equivalent of a week's wages. Into it he copied those poems to date which he thought worthy of preservation, including Robin and Luke, The Invocation, Helpston Green, The Wish, etc., etc. On p.8 is the note: 'These leaves of scribbling that only deserve and certainly would have been obliterated by the flames had not friendships warm atachments interposed to retrieve them from so just a fate are left to E. Drury as desired. Helpstone July 1820 John Clare'.

2. An octavo notebook, inscribed on p.1 'John Clare', which Clare was using about 1820.

6"×4", 52 pp., marbled grey paper covers.

Contents, which are often scored through, consist of poems and miscellaneous jottings. The writing is in pencil, often very faint, and from both ends.

 $7'' \times 4\frac{1}{2}''$, 199 pp. (+23 blank), interleaved with blotting paper, worn brown leather limp covers.

Inside the front cover is also inscribed: 'Monday 10th August 1828/A Favourite Tabby Cat/Got killed to day either/purposly or by accident I/cannot make out which'. On p.22, following a series of twenty-five sonnets, Clare has written: 'Memorandoms and Stray thoughts in Prose & Verse—As I have hitherto lost a great many of my best thoughts by not heeding to set them down at the moment I have for the first time enlisted this book for their service'. The scraps of poetry and prose that follow are often scored through and are sometimes written in pencil. The MS. concludes with a glossary and 'A Catalogue of my Books that were given me & by whom given'. This is No. 97 in the Peterborough Centenary Catalogue.

18. A small oblong notebook, entitled Old Songs & Ballads, which Clare was using in 1827-8.

 $4'' \times 64'''$, 34 pp. (+146 blank), worn brown half-calf with marbled boards.

The introduction begins: 'I commenced sometime ago with an intention of making a collection of old Ballads . . .', and contents include John Randall, The Maidens Welcome, The False Knights Tradegy, Loves Riddles, Banks of Ivory, etc. There is an additional poem, Round Oak, in pencil and several of the blank pages at the end contain traces of pencil writing which has been erased. This is No. 98 in the Peterborough Centenary Catalogue.

19. An octavo notebook, inscribed inside the front cover 'John Clare/Northborough/Northamptonshire/Novr 1845', which Clare was using at Northampton.

 $6\frac{3}{4}$ " $\times 4\frac{1}{2}$ ", 134 pp., green limp covers.

Contents, which are written in pencil and from both ends, include songs to various girls and other poems, quotations from the Book of Revelation, lists of girls' names, lists of books, drafts of letters to his wife and to 'My dear Childern', etc. This is No. 110 in the Peterborough Centenary Catalogue.

TRANSCRIPTS OF THE ASYLUM POEMS

20. The Knight Transcripts, being two volumes of Clare's Asylum poetry transcribed by W. F. Knight, house-steward at the Northampton Asylum between 1845 and 1850, and continued by other copyists.

 $8'' \times 6\frac{1}{2}''$, [434] and 449 pp., black half-calf, marbled boards, with 'Clare's Poetry/I (II)' on the spine. (In the earlier part of Vol. I poems instead of pages are numbered.)

These volumes, which contain over 800 poems, some dated but the majority not, are the chief source for Clare's later poetry, the originals having nearly all disappeared. Opposite a pencil sketch of Clare's cottage at Helpston signed 'W.F.K.', Knight has written 'Poetry by John Clare', written by him while an/Inmate of the Northampton/General Lunatic Asylum', which is followed by an introduction beginning 'Copied from the Manuscripts as presented to me by Clare . . .' For a scrap in Clare's hand see Vol. I, pp. 323-4. Both volumes contain the book-plate of G. A. Cove, and were presented by his brother H. J. Cove in 1938.

21. The Knight/Taylor Transcripts, being a copy in two volumes of the Knight Transcripts.

13½"×8½", [387] and [469] ll., red half-morocco with 'Poems/by/John Clare/while in the/Northampton/Lunatic Asylum./Vol. I (II).' on the spine. (Leaves are unnumbered, but each poem has a numbered reference to its appearance in Knight.)

These volumes, with writing on the rectos only, often differ from Knight in spelling and punctuation. There are margin references to A. E. Baker's Glossary of Northamptonshire Words and Phrases, 1854. The pencil emendations are probably in the hand of J. L. Cherry, who presumably used the original sheets for his Life and Remains of John Clare, 1873. There are two additional transcripts at the end of Vol. 2—Song for Miss B——, 'Copied from the original now in possession of Mr. Henry Harris', and The Daisy, 'Copied from the original in possession of Mr. G. Packer, Northampton'.

OTHER MANUSCRIPT POEMS

22. A series of poems etc. dating from about 1821.

[26] pp. 7 loose sheets of varying size, watermarked 1818 and 1819.

7"×4½", [4] pp.

In the hand of J. L. Cherry. The original was sold by John Taylor to the Trustees of the British Museum in 1873.

49. A letter from W. C. Taylor to John Taylor asking for means of refuting Alaric A. Watts's criticism in the Alfred of the latter's treatment of Clare. Undated.

 $7\frac{1}{4}$ " $\times 4\frac{1}{2}$ ", [4] pp.

The paper is watermarked 1831. The episode took place in 1832.

50. A letter from Miss Mortlock to John Taylor concerning Clare's admission to Dr. Allen's Asylum, dated Peterborough, 12th July, [1837].

 $7\frac{1}{2}$ " $\times 4\frac{3}{4}$ ", [4] pp.

51. Two letters from Dr. Matthew Allen to Cyrus Redding dated High Beech, 21st April and 25th May, 1841.

 $10\frac{1}{4}" \times 8"$, [6] pp.

His views on the treatment of insanity are expressed.

52. A volume of 55 letters from Thomas Inskip of Shefford, Beds., to Clare and W. F. Knight between 5th October, 1846 and 25th August, 1849.

73"×6", half-leather with 'Inskip's Letters' on the spine.

Fourteen of the letters are addressed to Clare, and forty-one to Knight. The friendship of Inskip, former friend of Robert Bloomfield, was one of the few sources of comfort to Clare during his period at Northampton, and it is likely that these letters stimulated him to continue writing. Also included are a number of cuttings from the Bedford Times containing poems by Clare and Inskip. The volume contains the book-plate of G. A. Cove, and was presented by his brother H. J. Cove in 1938.

53. A letter from George Reid to John Taylor enquiring about Clare dated Glasgow, 26th March, 1848.

8"×5", [4] pp.

Reid has added a transcript of Clare's last letter to him dated Northborough, 17th November, 1841.

54. A collection of 57 items of correspondence with John Taylor between 1850 and 1863.

[206] pp.

Correspondents include Charles Clare, Sophia Clare, the Rev. Thomas James, J. Walton, and J. Whitaker. The letters deal largely with the financial needs of Mrs. Clare and her family, the fund held in trust, and Taylor's purchase from J. How of the copyright of The Rural Muse. This is part of the collection of H. C. Brooke Taylor acquired in 1934. See also MSS. 22, 32, 34, 43.

LETTERS AND OTHER MATERIAL AFTER CLARE'S DEATH

55. A foolscap scrap-book of John Taylor's (Northampton) correspondence dating from immediately after Clare's death in May 1864 to early 1866.

 $14\frac{3}{4}$ × 10", 105 ll., grey paper covers.

Contents, which are pasted on sixty-six pages, include thirty-nine items addressed to Taylor between 30th May and 16th August 1864 most being requests for album portraits of Clare, eleven letters to Taylor (with four 10¼"×8", 90 pp. Typescript.

Note: The Collection also includes a representative selection of photographic reproductions of MSS, now in the possession of American libraries.

PORTRAITS AND RELICS

73. An engraving by Edward Scriven from the portrait of Clare by William Hilton, 1820.

35"×3", in a black and gilt frame.

The original portrait is now in the National Portrait Gallery. The engraving was used as a frontispiece to the first volume of The Village Ministrel, and Other Poems, 1821.

- A photograph of the portrait of Clare by William Hilton, 1820.
 14"×11½", in a black and gilt frame.
- 75. A bronzed plaster bust of Clare by Henry Behnes Burlowe, 1828.

211 high, on a pedestal 4" high.

The sculptor, Henry Behnes (1802-1837), took the name of Burlowe to avoid being confused with his more famous but degenerate brother William. This likeness was done during Clare's fourth visit to London. It was originally owned by Taylor and after his death in 1864 was sold by public auction at Christie's on 17th March, 1865, passing into the possession of Clare's first biographer, Martin. The bust was purchased by the Northampton Public Libraries Committee in 1913.

76. A pencil drawing of Clare, early 1840's (?).

3"×21", in a black and gilt frame.

A half-length portrait presented by J. W. and Anne Tibble. The artist is unknown, but possibly a fellow patient of Clare's at the Northampton Asylum.

77. An oil painting of Clare by Thomas Grimshaw, 1844.

 $28\frac{3}{4}" \times 23\frac{7}{8}"$, in a gilt frame.

Thomas Grimshaw was a Northampton artist who painted a number of pictures of varying merit, this portrait being one of the best examples of his work. It is a half-length, life-size picture, representing the poet nearly full face, looking to the left. It was owned by Edmund Francis Law (Mayor of Northampton 1859–1860), and after his death was given by his family to the Corporation of Northampton, Christmas 1895. The spelling 'Grimshawe' on the inscription attached to the frame is incorrect.

 A water-colour of Clare on his favourite seat in the portico of All Saints' Church, by George Maine, 1848.

 $16\frac{7}{8}$ " × $12\frac{3}{4}$ ", in a gilt frame.

George Maine was a Northampton artist. The painting is signed by Clare. The poet has a mild expression, and is wearing breeches and leggings. There exist several copies of this portrait. 79. A water-colour of Clare sitting in a chair, by George Maine; a study for the above, 1848.

 $7'' \times 6\frac{1}{8}''$, in a gilt frame.

80. A pen-and-ink drawing of Clare by a fellow patient, about 1860(?).

7\(\frac{5}{8}'' \times 4\(\frac{7}{8}''\), in a black and gilt frame.

The poet is drawn whole length and seated.

81. A photograph of Clare by W. W. Law and Son, 1862.

33"×23", unframed.

The poet is taken half-length and seated. The mount is signed by Clare. John Taylor, who published a half-tone print of it in 1864, writes in a letter in the Northampton Herald for 2nd September, 1893: 'taken by Mr. Law, of Gold-Street, I having special permission from the Doctor at the Asylum for Clare to visit Mr. Law's for the purpose. His fine head and exceedingly fine long cyclashes are well represented in the photograph. At the same time he signed his name on a dozen slips of paper to be placed under the portrait'.

82. A half-tone print of the above photograph of Clare, 1864. 4½"×3½", in a black and gilt frame.

The signature of Clare is reproduced below, as with the original photograph,

83. A water-colour of Clare in old age by a fellow patient, 1864(?).
7% in diameter, in a black and gilt frame.
This half-length portrait represents the poet shortly before his death sitting in his armchair.

84. The death-mask of Clare, 1864.

9½" high.

This cast was probably taken by Dr. Edwin Wing, Medical Superintendent of the Northampton Asylum from 1859 until his death in 1865. It was given to the Corporation of Northampton by Dr. S. E. Martin, Senior Assistant Medical Officer, St. Andrew's Hospital, in 1918.

85. A wash drawing of Clare by C. A. Channer. Undated.

 $8'' \times 8\frac{1}{2}''$, unframed.

This is an unfinished whole length portrait of Clare seated. The paper is watermarked 1885.

86. A pair of black leather laced shoes, and hair brush and comb, used by Clare at the Northampton Asylum.

These were given to the Corporation of Northampton by Dr. S. E. Martin, Senior Assistant Medical Officer, St. Andrew's Hospital, in 1918, and are kept at the Northampton Central Museum and Art Gallery. 87. An oak bookcase belonging to Clare.

84" high × 37½" (upper part), 41" (lower part) wide × 13¾" (upper part), 16¾" (lower part) deep.

This is believed to have been a gift from Mrs. Emmerson. After Clare's death it was purchased by John Taylor. In 1866 it was purchased by public subscription and presented to the Northampton Museum, and was later transferred to the Library.

Note: The Collection also includes portraits of some of Clare's patrons and acquaintances, and illustrations of various places associated with his life.

III

CLARE'S LIBRARY

Clare's library as preserved in Northampton consists of 440 volumes. A number of these originally belonged to members of his family or to one or other of his friends. The majority, however, are presentation copies to Clare from his patrons and fellow-poets, and also from a number of publishers. Many contain interesting inscriptions. The name of the donor and the date of receipt given here are taken from the books themselves. Subjects particularly well represented are poetry, natural history and religion.

After the poet's death the library was bought by John Taylor from his widow at Northborough. In 1866 it was purchased by public subscription and presented to the Northampton Museum, and was later transferred to the Clare Collection at the Library. In 1902 the Public Libraries Committee regrettably sold by auction fifteen volumes. The amount realised after deduction of expenses was £225 10s. 1d. In this catalogue those missing volumes are indicated by means of italics.

INDEXES OF TITLES AND FIRST LINES

The index of first lines includes all Clare's poems in his own hand and in the asylum transcripts, with the exception of a few fragments and a few pieces now obliterated. Poems with no title other than Song, Ballad, Sonnet or Fragment are not included in the index of titles. The same usually applies to titles which merely duplicate the first line. Titles given in square brackets are not found in the MSS., and are mostly taken from the volumes printed in Clare's lifetime. As the poems in the Knight/Taylor transcripts follow fairly closely their order in Knight it has not normally been found necessary to refer to the later transcripts. The two poems that appear in Knight/Taylor only are indicated, as is also the one poem that appears in Knight only. The readings of Knight are in general preferred, but Knight/Taylor titles are used when Knight's are not distinctive. Prose passages are indexed, but letters and memoranda are for the most part excluded.

CATALOGUE OF THE

JOHN CLARE COLLECTION

IN THE

NORTHAMPTON PUBLIC LIBRARY

WITH INDEXES TO THE POEMS IN MANUSCRIPT

SUPPLEMENT 1971

An important collection of Clare material, formerly the property of Miss I. M. F. Hooker, was bought at Sotheby's on Tuesday, 23rd June, 1970, with the aid of funds from the Pilgrim Trust, the Friends of the National Libraries and the Victoria and Albert Museum. Further information about this collection can be obtained from Sotheby's sale catalogue and from an article 'John Clare: some unpublished documents of the Asylum period' in Northamptonshire Past and Present, vol. 3, no. 5, 1964, pp. 190—198.

COUNTY BOROUGH OF NORTHAMPTON

PUBLIC LIBRARIES, MUSEUMS AND ART GALLERY COMMITTEE

410. A series of 9 letters from W. F. Knight to Joseph Stenson, iron-master in Luton, between 1844 and 1847.

The letters, which relate to Clare and contain thirteen of his poems, are dated 22nd September 1844, 14th March [1845], 23rd June 1845, 14th September 1845, 3rd March 1846, 8th April 1846, [December 1846], [27th December 1846], and [15th February 1847]. Also included are copies of Clare's poems A Valentine Nosegay to Mary and Graves of Infants in Stenson's hand, and of The Maid of Feusalem (dated March 1844) and No more blustery winter rages (dated 8th March 1850) in unknown hands. The poem Loment to Friendship is probably by Knight.

411. A letter from Charles Clare to his father John Clare dated Northboro', 27th June, 1850

$$7\frac{3}{4}" \times 5"$$
, [4] pp.

Clare has written in pencil on the last $2\frac{1}{2}$ pages of the sheet, the contents consisting mainly of Song. O I love the bonny lassie In her dress o' tartan plaid.

412. A letter from Clare to W. F. Knight at Birmingham Asylum dated Asylum, Northampton, 8th July, 1850.

413. A letter from W. F. Knight to Clare dated Borough Asylum, Birmingham, 11th July, 1850.

Clare has written a poem in pencil in the spaces: it begins My Phebe she is handsome wi back as white as milk.

414. A letter from Clare to W. F. Knight at Birmingham Asylum dated 11th April, 1851.

$$8\frac{3}{4}" \times 5\frac{1}{2}"$$
, [3] pp.

This letter begins with a rhymed acrostic on George Maine (see No. 78).

415. An octavo notebook consisting of the last four leaves of an account book of which the rest has been cut away (stubs remaining), which Clare was using at Northampton.

$$7'' \times 4\frac{1}{2}''$$
, 8 pp.

Contents, which are written in pencil, consist of three poems, In this summer's health and dew (headed in another hand Song. Miss Hand), Song. Love lives beyond, and Song. When in summer thou walkest.

348 CLARE (JOHN) FINE SERIES OF TWELVE A.Ls.s., c. 40 pp., 4to and folio, March 1820-January 1831 (ten of the letters belong to the period 1820-21), TO HIS PUBLISHERS TAYLOR & HESSEY (comprising 9 to John Taylor and 3 to J. A. Hessey), containing many references of great interest to Keats (who was also published by Taylor & Hessey) and discussing at length Clare's own poetry, its composition, revision (by Taylor) and publication, three of the letters containing drafts of poems including the draft of Clares' sonnet to the memory of Keats which is introduced with the words

I send you my sorrows for poor Keats while his memory is warmly felt—they are just a few beats of the heart—the head has nothing to do with them—therefore they will stand no critisism.

also including a draft of "The small wind wispers thro the leafless hedge" ("... this cold morning has produced a Sonnet for you such as it is"), with address panels, seals and postmarks: all the letters complete though two of them are unsigned (the former of which concludes "Yours & T's faithful St. as warm as ever—Farwell")

29 June 1820 . . . I am very sorry for poor Keats the symptoms of his illness I think very alarming as we have people in the same way here often who creep on for a little time—but it generally proves death has struck at the root—for they mostly go off—my only master whom I livd with when a boy at the blue bell went off the same way exactly—be sure tell Keats to take care of cold from extremes & fatigue this hot weather—I should like to see the fiz of the man before he drops off & hope he will last till next winter when I shall hazard my self to Town unaccompanyd & then I shall have no put offs on these kind of matters . . .

4 July 1820 . . . I began on our friend Keats new Vol:—find the same fine flowers spread if I can express myself in the wilderness of poetry—for he lanches on the sea without compass—& mounts pegasus without saddle or bridle as usual & if those cursd critics could be showd out of the fashion wi their rule & compass & cease from making readers believe a Sonnet cannot be a Sonnet unless it be precisly 14 lines & a long poem as such unless one first sits down to wire draw out regular argument & then plod after it in a regular manner the same as a Taylor cuts out a coat for the carcass—I say then he may push off first rate—but he is a child of nature warm & wild . . . [the letter proceeds with quotations from Isabella, Hyperion, the Odes to Autumn and Melancholy, which Clare noticed as "striking", etc.]

14 December 1820... the fact is if I cannot hear from John Taylor now & then I cannot ryhme I dont know the reason but so it is—I get on cursed bad with ways in a village I find the thing too surcumscribed & narrow for ones thinking always dinging at rural things wont do...

[postmark: 4 January 1821]... The Cottage you seem to reserve for the fourth Vol who the d——I do you think will unstring their purses for Clares 4th Vol of Poems I shall have the ague in even thinking to venture again after my 3 children are christened by the critics... but do as seemeth thee best friend John for thou hast been a lucky godfather for my first child...

[June 1821] . . . I am anxious of getting my book out & not only that let me tell you but am as anxious of seeing you do justice to Keats by bringing him out agen which I hope you will lose no time to do . . . while the ashes of genius is warm the public look with a tender anxiety for what it leaves behind . . . the ill treatment he has met will now be productive of more advantages—tho the warm heart that once felt it—is cold & carless to praise or to censure now . . . I have been reading his "Eve of St Agnes" agen—were madeline is described undressing herself it is beautifull & too luscious to describe how much so . . .

The texts of these letters printed in The Letters of John Clare, ed. J. W. and Anne Tibble, 1951, are not altogether satisfactory—thus in some places words are inadvertently omitted and in others misread (e.g. in one letter snatches appears as Sketches and writing as only, in another impudence appears as independence, etc.) and Clare's expressive punctuation and layout are not always accurately represented. The published texts omit the four poems contained in the letters, viz: the letter of 14 Dec. 1820 contains the sonnet "The small wind wispers thro the leafless hedge": the letter of 24 March 1821 contains a draft of the sonnet To Time ("In fancys eye what an extended span"): the letter of [March/April 1821] contains the sonnet To the Memory of Keats and a 24-line Song ("Fill the foaming cups again"). Of these all but the last [? unpublished] were included in Clare's volume The Village Minstrel (1821) but these manuscript texts contain some interesting revisions while the sonnets To the Memory of Keats and To Time also contain interlinear revisions by Taylor. To Time has appended an (unpublished) note in which Clare explains his indecision over two of the sonnet's lines and asks Taylor to decide ("if worth deciding") between his alternative versions.
